What is the Family Definition?

Restricts the number of people who can live together in a house or apartment in Madison based on:

- Zoning district;
- Whether they are renters or homeowners; and
- Whether they are all related to one another

Maximum Number of Residents Allowed by Zoning District (Simplified)

	All Low Density, 1-3	Other Zoning
	Family Zoning	Districts where
	Districts	Housing is Allowed
Renter-Occupied	Related + 1	Related + 4
	(2 unrelated)	(5 unrelated)
Owner-Occupied	Related + 4	Related + 4
	(5 unrelated)	(5 unrelated)

Why Change the Family Definition?

- 1. Improve Equity
- 2. Increase Housing Choice
- 3. Current Practice Has Negative Impacts

1. Improve Equity

Negative Impacts

- 1. Landlords use it to keep tenants from reporting poor living conditions
- 2. Some neighbors use it as leverage against other neighbors

Negative Impacts

- 1. Landlords use it to keep tenants from reporting poor living conditions
- 2. Some neighbors use it as leverage against other neighbors
- 3. Renters and homeowners with roommates cannot have dependency living arrangements and second kitchens

What is Proposed?

What Change is Being Proposed?

Allow the same number of people to live together, regardless of ownership status (up to five unrelated adults)

Remove limit on number of children/dependents

Allow dependency living arrangements and second kitchens, regardless of ownership status

Some Effects of the Change

Allows two couples with children to live together as one household

Allows three to five people to rent together

Allows renters with disabilities to have a live-in attendant or relative with their own living space

Proposed Maximum Number of Residents Allowed by Zoning District (Simplified)

	All Zoning Districts where Housing is Allowed
Owner or Renter-	Related + 4 and their
Occupied	dependents
	(5 unrelated)

Why Are These Numbers Proposed?

- Multi-generational households will still be allowed with no limit on number of related family members.
- 2. Many zoning districts today allow up to five unrelated people in a household with negative impacts based on number. Based on that experience, City staff believe that five unrelated adults and their dependents is a standard that would reasonably address potential impacts of neighbors on other neighbors.

Frequently Asked Questions

Will This Change Put Residents in Unsafe Living Conditions?

Will Many Owner-Occupied Houses Become Rentals?

How Is this Going to Solve the Housing Affordability Problem?

On its own, this change will increase housing access but does not add additional housing units. It's just one tool in the toolbox.

Part of a Package of Initiatives

Regulating short-term rentals so our housing stock is used for resident housing instead of tourist accommodations

Changing the threshold for the number of housing units so that fewer multi-family developments need permission from the Plan Commission before being built

Increasing funding for affordable housing

Prioritizing funding affordable housing in locations with excellent transit access to decrease household transportation costs

Part of a Package of Initiatives

Creating a transit-oriented development overlay district which allows more stories as a permitted use and requires transit supportive site and building design

Allowing accessory dwelling units as a permitted use

Funding down payment assistance for homebuyers and rehabilitation assistance for homeowners

Adding a downtown affordable housing zoning incentive (proposed legislation)
