Community Organizations Partner Together to Bring Making Spaces Programming into Madison's Public Schools

Madison, Wis. – Making Spaces is an exciting new partnership between the Bubbler at Madison Public Library, Madison Metropolitan School District, and the Foundation for Madison Public Schools that supports maker education in our schools. The program aims to develop a national strategy to sustainably integrate making into schools across the country.

Supported with professional development, planning, and community connections from the Madison Public Library, our schools are now looking for community support and help in spreading the word about their new initiatives. Each school has created a fundraising campaign with the support of the Foundation for Madison Public Schools that will help fund these innovative new projects.

Partnership is a key component of the project, and integral to the organizations involved. “The Foundation is committed to partnering with other community organizations to provide the best educational experiences for our students and more opportunities for families and the community to support our schools,” says Foundation Executive Director Melinda Heinritz.

The Bubbler is excited to introduce its six 2017 partners in the Madison Metropolitan School District and their ambitious plans for the future of making and learning in their spaces! These schools include: Sandburg Elementary, Whitehorse Middle School, Franklin Elementary School, Toki Middle School, Huegel Elementary School, and Capital High School.

The Bubbler became one of 10 national hubs in the Making Spaces initiative, led by Maker Ed; the Children's Museum of Pittsburgh; and Google, in 2016.

With the support of the Madison community, the Bubbler will continue to support the Making Spaces project with 5-7 new schools included in the 2017-2018 school year. Applications for school involvement will be released in early November.
