Project: East Side Pressure Zone Conversion

To improve water service to your area, Madison Water Utility will be converting your neighborhood to a higher water pressure during the first week of November. Your water pressure will go up from 15 to 25 pounds per square inch. This revision will improve water flow to your home and fire protection to your neighborhood. You do not have to do anything to prepare for this change and it should not impact your home's plumbing.

Al Larson, the Water Utility Principal Engineer, will be available at the meeting to explain and discuss the project to all interested parties.
