Plan for a Healthy Neighborhood

What is a Health Impact Assessment (HIA)?

A Health Impact Assessment is a process which is used to assess the health impacts of policies, plans and projects.

Why is a HIA important?

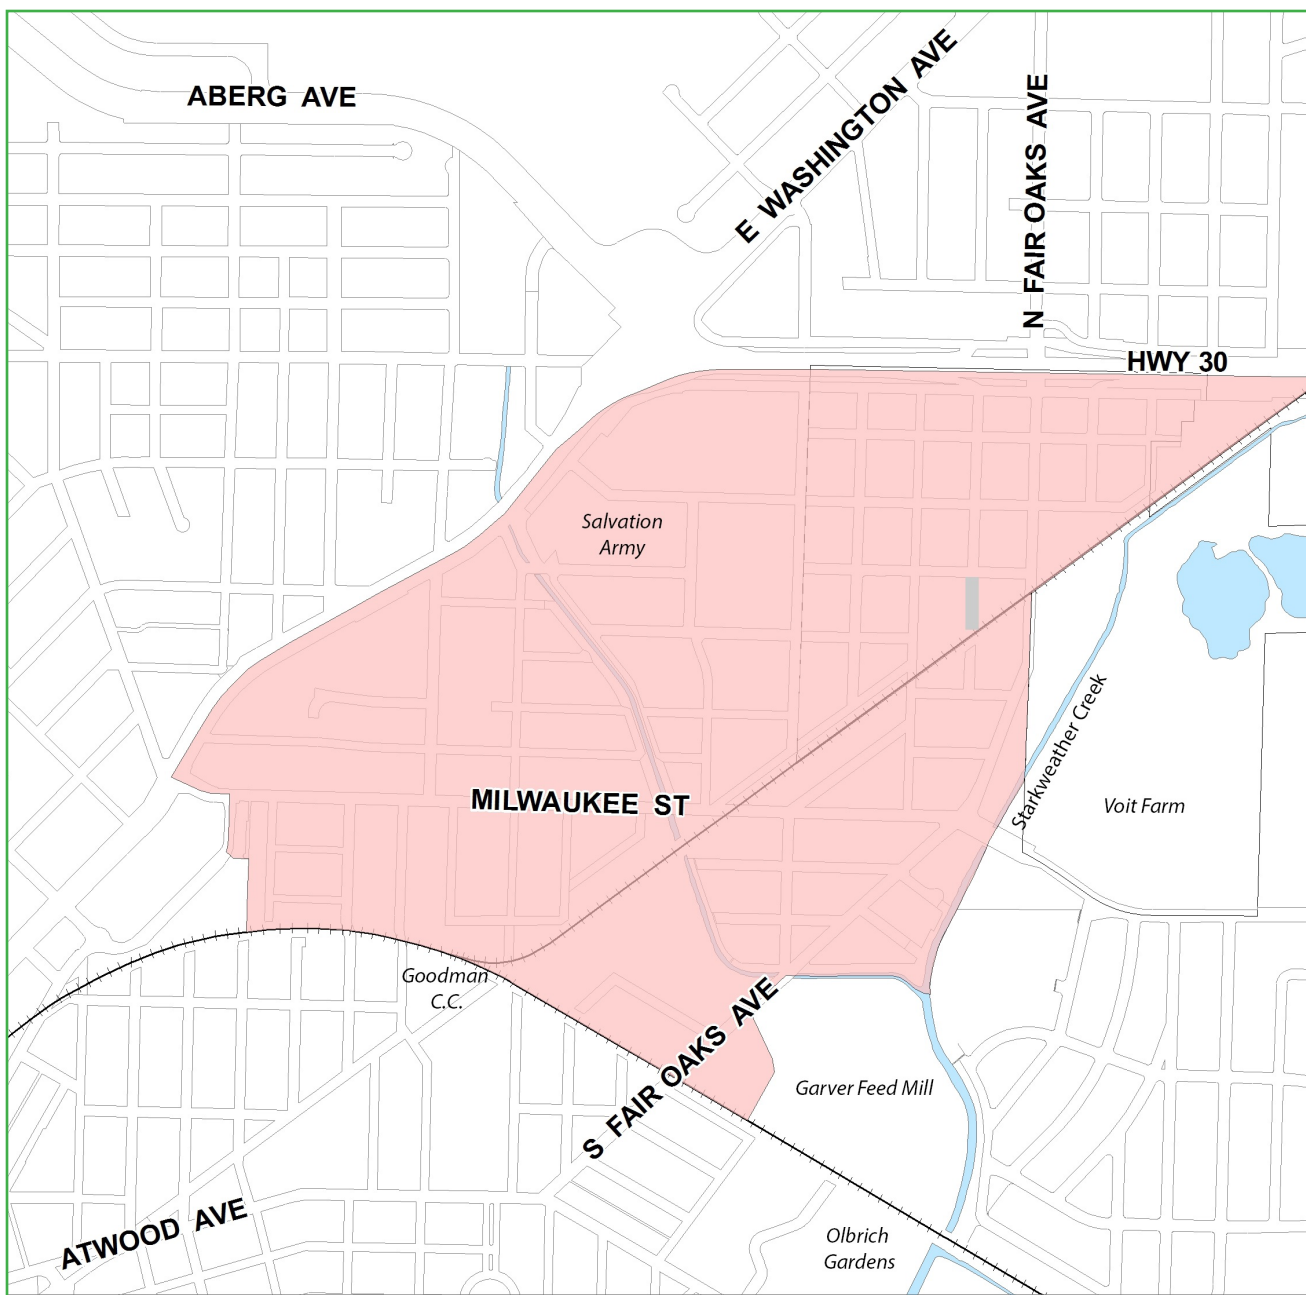

- Incorporates health into the decision-making process
- Informs the decision which is being assessed
- Highlights health disparities and inequities
- Engages and empowers the community
- Generates health-based recommendations that support positive health outcomes

Darbo Worthington Starkweather HIA Project Description

The City of Madison is currently working on developing the Darbo–Worthington–Starkweather Neighborhood Plan.

As part of this planning process a Health Impact Assessment (HIA) of the neighborhood plan will be conducted to assess the potential health consequences of the proposed plan.

Because the Health Impact Assessment is informing the Darbo Worthington Starkweather Neighborhood Plan it will follow the timeline of this planning process
