

South Madison Planning Process 2019-2020

Why should you get involved?

The South Madison area awaits a bright future and the City of Madison Planning Division would like to invite you to join this planning effort and be part of its transformation. All residents, the business community, and major stakeholders are welcome to come together and develop a shared vision for this thriving community. You don't need to be an expert to get involved!

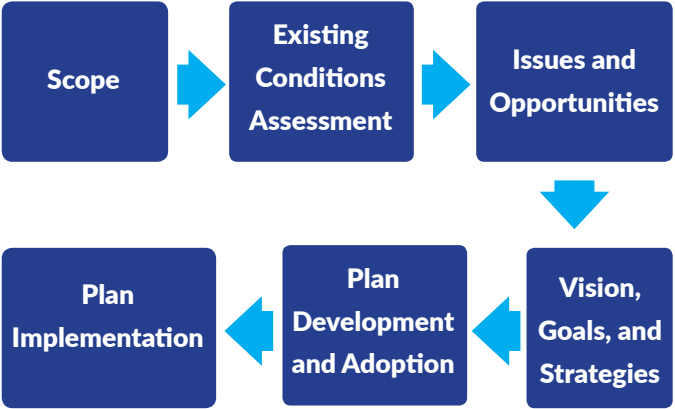

How did this planning process get started?

In 2005, the South Madison community identified what was relevant to the community and what actions could be taken to build upon the assets and address the challenges. The South Madison Neighborhood Plan has been used over the last fifteen years to help strengthen the area.

In 2019-2020, the City will be working with residents, southside business community, and other major stakeholders to identify what is relevant today and determine how to address opportunities and challenges. We would like to have all neighborhoods in South Madison to be involved and help us map out a better future. Whether you are a resident living in Bram's Addition, Burr Oaks, Capital View, or Town of Madison, we would like to hear from you!

Planning Study Area

During this plan, we will be asking your input on:

- Community facilities
- Economic development
- Historic & cultural assets
- Housing
- Food access
- Land use
- Redevelopment
- Natural areas, parks & open space
- Safety, streets & transportation
- Sustainability, resilience & utilities
- Well-being

What will be the outcome?

This plan will provide the opportunity to crystallize ideas into formal recommendations for South Madison. With the dissolution of the Town of Madison, approximately 5,000 people, 6,000 acres, 1,400 parcels, and public facilities and infrastructure will be absorbed into the City of Madison on October 31, 2022.

At the end of the planning process, we'll have an area plan covering the South Madison area including Town of Madison.
