Present Wisconsin Author

Michael Perry

Author of Population 485, Truck: A Love Story, Coop, and Visiting Tom

Raised on a small Midwestern dairy farm, Perry put himself through nursing school while working on a ranch in Wyoming. He lives with his wife and two daughters in rural Wisconsin, where he serves on the local volunteer fire and rescue service and is an amateur pig farmer. Perry's essays and nonfiction have appeared in numerous publications including The New York Times Magazine, Esquire, Backpacker, Outside, Runner's World, Salon.com, and he is a contributing editor to Men's Health magazine.
