Staying Active in Winter

Shhhhh, do you hear that? It's the sound of snowshoeing. This silent sport, along with hiking when we lack good snow-cover, provides a unique way to explore Madison Parks. It's also a fantastic way to stay active during the colder winter months and it's easy to learn.

Thousands of park acres offer miles and varieties of trails to explore. From level paths to hilltop climbs, from sunny open fields or shady woodsy trails, you can snowshoe just about anywhere with good snow cover. Exceptions are groomed ski trail and off-trail in a conservation park.

HOW TO GET STARTED

- Rent a Pair: Elver Park offers limited quantities of rentable snowshoes from the staffed winter shelter. Hours and pricing are listed on the Elver Park webpage.
- Borrow a Pair: We've partnered with REI to provide loaner snowshoes on Saturday and Sunday, February 1 and 2 at Elver Park during Madison Winter Festival.
- Join an Event: Two candlelight snowshoe hike events scheduled in January, provide a fun evening with other snowshoers and winter hikers. With marked trails less than a mile, experience is not required, and makes for a great beginner experience.
- Plot your Course: Take a peek at a trail map posted online for a number of popular parks.

SNOWSHOEING TIPS

While allowed anywhere in a general park with good snow-cover or an ungroomed trail, you should keep a few things in mind while you're out.

- Generally, good snow-cover is defined as more than 4 inches but this depends on the ground conditions and type of snow.
- If you choose to go off trail, be on the lookout and stay clear of any signs of habitat or snow tunnels used by small, native critters for winter survival.
- In a conservation park, stay on ungroomed trails only. Cherokee Marsh-South Unit, Owen and Turville Point have groomed crosscountry ski trails when conditions allow.

Gaining Momentum: Madison's Bicycle Adventure Trail

An idea begins to take shape with a thoughtful plan, to create a network of singletrack bike-optimized trails connecting and supplementing existing trails. Through research and data analysis as part of the 2018–2023 Park and Open Space Plan, one of the recommended strategies from the plan is to improve connectivity to enhance access and create a comprehensive system of greenspace connections.

An interagency recreation bike facility team was formed, and led by Parks Planning and Development staff to discuss trail development progress and guide planning efforts, while identifying potential hurdles. Adding to this momentum, Madison Parks received a matching funds grant for $20,000 from the International Mountain Bicycling Association (IMBA) to develop a network of trails connecting greenspaces throughout the city.

Currently, Quarry Park offers the only designated mountain biking trail within the city of Madison. While the trails are ideal for the seasoned and savvy mountain biker, if you are a novice, opportunities in Madison are basically non-existent. Through public input and research, the team will oversee the development of the plan for the Madison Bicycle Adventure Trail (MBAT) created by IMBA. The MBAT is a way to connect multiple smaller trail segments in green spaces such as parks, greenways, and stormwater parcels throughout the city. In contrast to wider, multiuse trails, singletrack or mountain bike optimized trails are about the width of a single bike. Trails can feature twists and turns, rocky walls and bridges or be smooth and flowing. Trails are constructed using sustainable features and methods. Urban singletrack networks have proven to be successful in other mid-sized Midwestern cities by promoting good health through enhanced outdoor recreational opportunities and connecting people to nature.

Images show trail examples in Bentonville, Arkansas, a leader in this effort.

Madison's options and ideas are endless and the public will be invited to join the conversation. Public input meetings on the MBAT plan are anticipated for spring 2020 and will be held throughout the city. Look for updates on the biking in parks webpage.

Join us in welcoming Nimrod Hilliard, recently selected from more than 100 applicants as a WPCRC custodial worker. Nimrod began in September and works evenings Tuesday – Saturday, helping to keep the center in tip-top shape. Nimrod's previous experience includes positions with the Madison Public Library, the Madison Metropolitan School District and Mendota Mental Health Institute. A life-long Northsider, Nimrod is very excited to join the WPCRC team. Make sure you stop by and welcome him to the team.

Nimrod Hilliard

Congratulations are in order for WPCRC Program Assistant, Jamie Pratt, for receiving the Certified Parks and Recreation Professional Certification (CPRP). The CPRP certification is the national standard for parks and recreation professionals who are at the forefront of their profession. Attaining the CPRP designation shows you have met education and experience qualifications, and illustrates your commitment to the profession, as well as your knowledge and understanding of key concepts within parks and recreation.

Congrats to WPCRC Facility Manager, Terrence Thompson, for receiving the 2019 Alix Olson Award at the Mayor's Neighborhood Roundtable meeting. The Alix Olson Award recognizes contributions towards promoting a Tolerant and Just community. Alix is a retired detective with the Madison Police Department and founder of Seeking Tolerance and Justice Over Hate

Terrence Thompson

(STAJOH). Additionally, Terrence received the High Impact Award at the Northside Planning Council's North Star Awards, honoring lasting and significant impacts in the community.

Mayor Satya Rhodes-Conway introduced the addition of a new Teen Specialist position at the WPCRC in her 2020 Operating Budget. The position, a partnership with the City and the Madison Parks Foundation, will focus on expanding the Kids Need Opportunities at Warner (KNOW) program and development of youth and family programs and special events on the Northside. The recruitment process is anticipated to begin in January and position starting in spring 2020.
